ZOLLNER — BASKETBALL PIONEER

Detroit Pistons President Fred Zollner is one of the pioneers of major league basketball, organizing his first professional team in 1941 as an entry in the National Basketball League.

Success on the basketball floor was not long in coming to the president of the Fort Wayne piston-manufacturing corporation that bears his name. Bolstered by such stars as Bobby McDermott, Paul Birch and Buddy Jeanette (formerly of the Detroit Eagles), the Pistons won the National Basketball League championship four straight years (1943 through '46) and captured three world tournaments (1944-45-46) in Chicago Stadium, then recognized as the pinnacle of pro cage fame.

Zollner and his Pistons led three other NBL teams into the Basketball Association of America in 1948 and the following year joined the National Basketball Association, an amalgamation of the old NBL and the rival BAA.

In 1954-55, the Pistons won their first Western Division championship even though forced to play all playoff games on neutral or opponents' courts due to the presence of the American Bowling Congress tournament at Fort Wayne Coliseum, then the Pistons' home base. After hurdling Minneapolis in the semi-finals for the divisional flag, the Pistons extended Eastern champion Syracuse to the full seven games before bowing in the title game, 92-91.

The Pistons repeated as Western Division champion in 1955-56 and were beaten in the world championship playoffs by Philadelphia.

Despite two consecutive divisional pennants, attendance at Fort Wayne failed to improve and Zollner decided to move his club to a city with major league standards. He decided to wait, however, until after the 1956-57 season, which saw the Pistons share first place in the regular season race with St. Louis and Minneapolis, then bow in the first round of the playoffs.

Through his long affiliation with automotive leaders in Detroit, and because of his firm belief that the Motor City is the world's finest sports town, Zollner negotiated to bring the Pistons to Detroit in the spring of 1957.

KERBAWY — MAN IN MOTION

Hurricanes, typhoons, tornadoes, cyclones—all are mere zephyrs compared to the Detroit Pistons "man in motion." And his name is Nick Kerbawy.

As general manager of one of the world's finest basketball teams, Nick has set out to prove Detroiters right when they claim fame for their hometown as the nation's outstanding sports center.

"Look at it this way," says Nick. "Detroit and Michigan now have four major league sports teams . . . and that puts us on a par with New York and far ahead of the rest."

Nick gave up pro football's top job . . . that of boss of the world champion Detroit Lions . . . to accept the challenge afforded by the Pistons. "And you can forget all that talk about Detroit being cool towards basketball. This is a new age with a new generation of fans. It's a matter of educating them to our game and giving them that one priceless ingredient . . . a winner!"

Nick's success story is one of throwing open the door when opportunity knocked. Yet, he almost missed out on becoming one of the top executives in sports.

Back in 1944, Nick was a combination college professor-newspaper correspondent in Hillsdale, Mich., barely more than a stone's throw from Blissfield, where he was introduced to the world on August 8, 1912. Jack Sinclair, editor of the Hartford Day-Spring, urged him to take an interview for the Michigan State College sports publicity job But Nick forgot about the job that summer, during which he studied for his M.A. degree in Mexico City. A telephone call from MSC officials, informing him the job was his, served as the springboard to fame.

Michigan State was then on the brink of becoming a power in all phases of collegiate sports. An energetic push by Nick, who spread the word on the Spartans far and wide, sent MSC on its way.

In 1948, the late Bo McMillin was looking for a "hard-working fellow who doesn't want much money" to handle publicity for the struggling Detroit Lions. Three applied, but two wanted to start at the top. The third wanted only to show he could do the job. Nick was hired.

It's more than coincidence that the Lions, long in the red, became the top attraction in the National Football League when Nick, who served as business manager and assistant to McMillin as well as publicist, took over the general managership in 1952. The Lions sold more than 41,000 season tickets (in a 52,000-capacity park) for the 1958 season . . . a feat never before accomplished by any athletic team, professional, college or amateur!
